ANSWER

1. Ans: D

Explanation: In this sentence, "nevertheless" functions as a conjunctive adverb, indicating a contrast between the two parts of the sentence. It should be "consequently" to make the sentence correct.

2. Ans: C

Explanation: In this sentence, "but" is used to show contrast but we need to use 'as' to show cause and effect relationship.

3. Ans: E

Explanation:

All sentences are correct.

4. Ans: C

Explanation: To maintain proper parallelism, you should use "not only...but also" to connect the two qualities.

5. Ans: D

Explanation: In this version, the use of "however" as a connector creates a contrast that doesn't fit well with the cause-and-effect relationship between the contentious debate and the high emotions.

The correct connector to use in this context is "as a result" or "therefore".

6. Ans: B

Explanation: The word "likewise" is still not used appropriately in this context. To convey the cause-and-effect relationship between the company's changes and the decline in employee morale, you might use a different conjunction such as "because of which".

7. Ans: C

Explanation: Because does not convey the intended meaning of the sentence. It should be Therefore to make the sentence grammatically correct.

8. Ans: A

Explanation: "while" might be better used to introduce a contrast between two actions happening simultaneously. "Yet" is used to indicate a contrast between the limited budget and the team's accomplishment of delivering a remarkable product.

9. Ans: A

Explanation: "The project was completed on time in spite of the challenges posed by limited resources."

Even though does not convey the intended meaning of the sentence.

"In spite of" is used to show that something happened despite difficulties or obstacles.

10. Ans: C

Explanation: The word "sequentially" is not the appropriate connector in this context. It should be replaced with a suitable connector like "however," "nonetheless," or "nevertheless" to convey the intended meaning accurately.
